Quarter 4, 2021 - Main Highlights

- Despite a winter surge in COVID-19 cases, driven by the new and highly transmissible Omicron variant, global markets ended the year strongly, marking the third straight year of double digit gains. In its last policy meeting of the year the Federal Reserve signalled one of its most hawkish policy pivots in years as it attempts to bring inflation back under control. Policy makers have a difficult task facing them as they try to get inflation back to target without stifling economic growth. A number of economists have already downgraded their forecasts for US economic growth in 2022 as businesses struggle with absenteeism and consumers avoid public places in order to avoid catching the virus.
- Growth stocks outperformed in the period and this, coupled with a few stock-specific issues in the Fund, caused the relative returns of the Fund to lag a strong benchmark.
